Sculptor, Poet, Aquaciser

By Patsy Dew

How well do we know the people around us at the Center? Or in Northfield? I have long known that Mac Gimse was a respected sculptor and St. Olaf professor. Now that I work at the Senior Center I also know that he and his wife Jackie have been regular Aquacisers in the Center pool. They are both enthusiastic supporters of the Center, enjoy the people they meet here in the pool and join social gatherings of the Aqua group outside of the Center. After a recent conversation with Mac, I realized there is much I have not known about him, and am reminded that each person we meet has an interesting personal history.

Knowing that some of Mac's sculptures would be a part of the NSC Gallery's next exhibit, I sat down with him and asked about his life as an artist. I wondered if he had been interested in art as a child. He answered, "As a kid I had all the normal tinker toys, erector sets, whittling, homemade kites, but no noticeable art talent. My mother said when I went into a room, any room, I touched everything in it - carefully, but it still made people nervous. I still touch stuff, but try not to make folks nervous. This touchy-feely phase may have portended sculpture ahead."

Mac did not start his adult life as an artist. He and Jackie were newlyweds, living at Augsburg College where Jackie worked as he was going to the U of MN, in a PhD program in philosophy. Mac mentioned the pencil portrait he had secretly done of Jackie for their first wedding anniversary that was on display last year in the NSC Gallery. "It was after an art professor from Augsburg saw it that he said, 'Mac, it won't hurt you to take an art course?' So at age twenty-six I started with one ceramics course and loved it. The next semester I was done with philosophy and took undergrad courses at MCAD, U of MN, Augsburg, and St. Paul School of Art, and in one year picked up enough credits for an art major, then went off to the U of Iowa." At the U of Iowa Mac completed two degrees: an MFA in bronze casting, and an ABD in Art History. His next major career move was to St. Olaf college in 1970, where he taught art and art history until his retirement in 2001.

Mac's work at St. Olaf gave him many opportunities to travel, leading student and alumni groups on trips to all corners of the world. In fact, Mac is still leading trips; the next such trip will be this fall when he leads a group of Alumni plus friends to Spain, where he will incorporate the history of Spanish architecture into the tour. Mac commented that he has a special affinity for Japan and Japanese art, which he attributes in part to early childhood experiences growing up in Minot, ND. Many Japanese families were living in Minot at that time, relocated there from the Seattle because of WWII, and the US distrust of the Japanese living in one of our ports. Mac writes, "My understanding of the situation with the seven Japanese (cont on pg 2)

Between Earth and Sky by Mac Gimse

(Cont. from pg 1) families who came to Minot was that they were 2nd generation Japanese business people who were law-abiding and productive citizens. They were given an option between camps or an inland community. A call went out for towns to accept them, and Minot took all seven, in this instance, and set them up in housing and helped them reestablish their businesses, with federal assistance of course. There was a lot of prejudice against them and I got in trouble over that. I wouldn't allow anyone to speak unkindly about them, especially to their face, so I really went after anyone who slandered them. Needless to say, I got slammed plenty of times and occasionally wondered why I didn't let it go, but I couldn't. They were my friends. It taught me a lot about human malice and how much I didn't like people who were nasty to anyone different from white middle class."

During our short conversation I also learned that Mac is a poet, and often writes poems to accompany his sculptures, noting that the sculpture has "no voice." His poems further elucidate the emotions and ideas embodied in the sculpture. After we talked, I went to the internet to learn more about Mac, especially his work with the Peace Prize Forums held at St. Olaf. I invite you to do the same, and also to come to hear Mac talk about his work: "Fired Up" on February 15, at 10am, at the Center.

One more interesting fact: Mac and Jackie started taking Aquacise classes BEFORE this facility was built, in the Carleton pool, led by Peggy Prowe. Peggy was one of the leaders pushing for this wonderful facility with pool and fitness room, especially for seniors. Peggy Prowe, I am reminded, is another person with an interesting personal history.

Where in the World is Phyllis Borchert?

The photo is with a member of the Maori Tribe of New Zealand. My trip to Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania in 2011 was fantastic! There is no other word for it. I am a member of the Senior Center Travel Committee and love to travel. If I had big money, I would be out of MN more than in. I try to take one big trip every year or two. In 2010, I went to Russia, which included St. Petersburg, Moscow and points in between. It was exciting to sail on the Volga River! One of my first piano pieces as a child was "Song of the Volga Boatmen". It reverberated in my consciousness as the waves gently lapped on the sides of the Russian boat. In April this year, I will be on a trip sponsored by two churches in Faribault. In Greece and Turkey, we will be tracing the journey of Paul, the disciple. It's going to be great scenery, history and inspirational – what more could you want! Then the only big trip I have left is to go to China. But don't worry I still will be traveling but taking shorter trips. One shorter trip I took last summer was to the mansion in Wisconsin, "Ten Chimneys". It is a glorious estate of the famous New York theater actors, Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontaine. I saw Olympia Dukakis perform and this year it will be Joel Grey. Roy Rogers was born 100 years ago – (come on I know you're old enough to remember him!) So here's to multitudinous "Happy Trails to you!"

Seeking Volunteer Tour Guides for the Center

Volunteer Coordinator Nancy McDougall is organizing another Volunteer Crew. After getting the Admin Crew and the Work Crew off and running last month, she will be getting another volunteer group started this month. If you are someone who “hangs out” at the Center for any length of time you know we give personal tours to any prospective members. We’d like to know if you are willing to be “on-call” to help out when you are in the building. This list of people would be at the desk so that the receptionist could ask you to give a tour or help orient new people to the Center procedures and perhaps even the community. A coffee gathering will be held on Monday Feb 6 at 2:00pm to highlight the information we would like presented.

Learn About Blogs at the February Tech Time

The news media are filled with references to blogs. Many athletes, politicians, actors, and newsmakers of all varieties are bloggers. However, it turns out that many less famous folks are also active bloggers. Blogs are a great way to tell friends and relatives about interesting developments in one's life like a trip to China. Blogs give people an opportunity to share their creative work with the world. The Tech Time session will describe how blogs are created and make the case that blogging is a very simple process.

Refresh Your Computer Skills - The Price is Right

The Computer Center welcomes people who want to refresh their computer skills by retaking courses. The phrase, "Use It or Lose It", is certainly true for computer competency. A repeat exposure to any computer topic is a great way to preserve and enhance user skills. Nobody can grasp all aspects of any presentation with only one exposure. Everybody gains new insights during review sessions. The Computer Center encourages repeating courses by reducing the cost to half the original price.

Special Help for E-Readers

Experienced e-reader owners and new owners are invited to come to a special help session to deal with these new devices. Participants are invited to bring their lap tops and readers. Long time users will have a chance to share their knowledge with new users. This is a great chance to raise questions and get answers about e-readers. Library staff will be present to explain how to use library resources to borrow material for use on e-readers.

A Note to All Members

MEMBERS: The new computer system is working very well. The staff thank you for your cooperation and patience as you check in. One change in the system that you should know is that if you do not renew your membership by the due date, the system automatically marks

you as a nonmember and changes the fees to a non-member rate. To avoid this, please renew your membership prior to your due date.

Update from the Facilities Committee

We hope that you like the new look in the lobby. We think that the addition of vinyl makes a lot of sense and gives us a 'café' area. Other projects for this year include a shoe cubby to be added by the Fitness studio, a number of chairs in room 103 will be recovered, and the courtyard area is being studied for additional uses. A decision has been made to increase the rental fee on the pool. If you have the pool scheduled for a rental, you will be charged the current rate. For new rentals, the rate is $50.00 for the first hour and $30.00 for each additional hour.

Letter to the Editor

Friday, Dec 16th Christmas Party

I attended the Senior Center Christmas party on Friday, Dec 16th from 3:00 - 5:00, and had a wonderful time. I want to thank the Senior Center staff for the treats and wonderful program.

The party started with awesome cookies and assorted goodies. At 3:15 the chime choir directed by Marilyn Finneseth entertained with a number of Christmas pieces. I barely had time for more cookies when the Four of Us, Myrna Johnson, Ruth Legvold, Leslie Lykins and Donna Paulsen at the piano, started their Christmas songs. Then came the sing along and a hurried trip for more treats. The program ended with the Seasoned Singers directed by Donna May. I think I heard every Christmas Carol song, etc. that I had ever known. A wonderful afternoon.

If you missed it, remember to attend next year. I hope to see you there.

Three Artists Featured in our next NSC Gallery Show

Jan 30 - Mar 4 Exhibit of the works of these artists:
Ruth Meliza, Painter
Mac Gimse, Sculptor
David Perez, Photographer

Ruth Meliza calls herself a "late bloomer" as a painter. After 32 years of experience as a working mother, she developed health issues that forced early retirement. It was at that time that she started taking painting classes and spending time developing herself as an artist.

David Perez has long had an interest in photography, and at one time while working at a newspaper, he was often called upon to shoot the sporting events. The advent of a digital darkroom peaked his interest in 2004, and he spent many hours mastering the technical elements of digital photography.

Mac Gimse started his career in the visual arts in his late 20's. He has an MFA in Bronze Casting and an ABD in Art History. He is a professor emeritus of St Olaf College, and continues to work as an artist and teacher in the community.
